In a world where success is often measured superficially—beauty, money, status—it’s harder for today’s teens to pursue their dreams from the perspective of attaining something deeper, like happiness. The Road to Teen Vision: How to Find Your Passion and Realize Your Dreams is ready to change this perspective. As a teen and tween guidebook for transforming dreams into reality, The Road to Teen Vision teaches the reader how to identify their strengths, find their true passion, and use step-by-step methods for making their dreams come true.

The book also features profiles of fourteen inspirational kids, ages 10 to 19, who discovered their dreams and then made them happen. Stories include:

Keisha McDaniel, a 15-year-old clothing designer and founder of Pretty Tomboy Clothing whose many accomplishments are currently making headlines. Rachael Scdoris, a 17-year-old, legally blind dog-sled racer who will compete in the Iditarod in March 2005. Leon Little, an 11-year-old nonviolence activist and founder of YKAV. B.J. Pinchbeck, a 14-year-old Web designer who founded his own homework help site for kids on the Internet. Laura Lockwood, a 19-year-old who co-founded the largest teen volunteer group in the nation, Manateens. Amanda Dunbar, a 19-year old painter started at the age of 13, now commands thousands for her prolific paintings.
