It takes a great deal of fortitude to read a book like this. Especially if you find that you don't agree with every conversation. Who is to blame for the issues in the black community today? We have had all kinds of aide and government assistance, so how can we still be at the bottom academically and economically? Why doesn't anything work for us? Why is our reputation so bad, and why are black people the only victims of this discrimination we're always talking about? We will never get around to talking about and solving our race issues in the United States, if we aren't honest in identifying the problem. If you are unhappy with these ideas, let's find workable ones. Let's open this up to the light, and deal with it like twenty-first century adults. Read it here. Discuss it with others. Negro Please! The Time Has Come!
