When a late-spring snowfall buries the little seaside village of Provincetown out on the very tip of Cape Cod and the town curmudgeon is found dead at the foot of the world-famous Pilgrim Monument, the police are sure he committed suicide. But British newcomer, innkeeper and avid reader of cozies Liz Ogilvie-Smyth thinks otherwise. What she saw was incongruous and thus suspect but will she be able to convince the police chief to re-open the case as a murder investigation? This newly minted, self-created amateur sleuth along with her wise-cracking British-born but wanna be savvy American best friend Daphne Crowninshield and handsome Irish Provincetown cop James Finneran find themselves not only out to solve one mystery but three and one of them is a long-cold case. A fortune teller with an agenda, stray human bones, old grudges and a most surprising ending will keep you unable to put it down. If you like a wild ride full of red herrings and speaking of food, lots of good kitchen talk, a great locale and a host of quirky and lovable and not so lovable characters then this cozy is for you. More fun than a barrel of quahogs!
