"Five years ago, a good friend of mine hanged herself.

I had coffee with her the day before."

Thus begins Sramana Mitra's new book, Feminine Feminism.

The feminist movement has suffered major set-backs, one of the greatest being that talented women drop out of the work force in large numbers in their mid-thirties.

In this volume of Sramana Mitra's acclaimed Entrepreneur Journeys series, she presents stories of successful women entrepreneurs. She offers her analysis of how entrepreneurship may be the answer for women looking for a flexible way of balancing an ambitious career while still raising children.

Complex, emotional, intimate, candid perspectives offer a window into the struggles and triumphs of women who have chosen to actualize their talents through entrepreneurship.

An important message for 21st century women, and a great collection of female role models.
