The Conquistadors - Book 2 - Peru Hiram Bingham, William H. Prescott

Book 2 of The Conquistadors (Peru), is the story of the Spanish invasion and conquest of the Incas. The Incas controlled much of the east coast of South America, from what is now modern-day Ecuador and Peru right down to the south of Chile. Inland, the empire extended to the Andes. The Inca were the most advanced and most organised of all the pre-Columbian American civilizations. In 1532, this magnificent civilisation came face to face with another more advanced civilization, more advanced, at least in the art of war. The Inca were no match for the armour and weaponry of the Spanish. This volume contains one of the most detailed written histories of this clash of cultures, William H. Prescott's, The Conquest of Peru, (edited for easy reading for the general reader with the omission of many of the source footnotes that clutter the text). As an added bonus, Inca Land by Hiram Bingham is also included. Inca Land tells first-hand the story of Bingham's discovery in 1912 of Machu Picchu, the lost city of the Incas. The Conquistadors – Book 2 contains more than 306,000 words and is at an inexpensive price for all to enjoy. These books were compiled and formatted for easy reading by Paul Morrison and published by Kemetpharaonics Publishing House. The Conquistadors (Peru) includes Inca Land by Hiram Bingham; and The Conquest of Peru by William H. Prescott.
