His name is Ingo Swann. In the 1970s, he was one of America's secret weapons brought to bear against the Soviet Union: a psychic spy, personally tested by the CIA. In the 1980s, Swann held a TOP SECRET clearance, and was instrumental in training Army and Defense Intelligence personnel. Swann's psychic methods were a key component in the mind-war arsenals of the USAF, the Army, The Navy, the Defense Intelligence Agency, and many others, hidden deep inside compartments of the government. In 1995, Swann's secret army of mind-warriors were revealed by Secretary of Defense Robert Gates (appearing as the former Director of Central Intelligence) on ABC Nightline, with Ted Koppel. A few years later Swann wrote one of the most bizarre accounts in the history of the paranormal war effort, now documented by CIA sanctioned release of the once super-secret programs known as STAR GATE. According to Ingo Swann, and partially supported by documents from STAR GATE, a super-secret group, led by a mysterious "Mr. Axelrod" (his real name remains a closely held secret) -- put him mind-to-mind and face-to-face against an extraterrestrial avatar in human form. The story of extraterrestrial human-mind to alien-mind telepathy, a dangerous personal encounter, and even a near-death experience of coming under laser fire from an extraterrestrial vehicle somewhere in the northern wilderness of Alaska, sounds like pages torn from a science fiction novel. The core of the story is the threat of invasive 'telepathy' to penetrate the human conscious experience.
