The GG Ethics Game is a web-based simulation, which allows participants to assume leadership roles in a fictitious organization or company. The leadership teams must solve a set of problems which are typical of those facing people in various management structures in the US and around the world. These choices have both intended and unintended financial and social consequences, mirroring the sometime randomness of our lives. The simulation may be used as a part of a traditional undergraduate or graduate ethics class or facilitate a company's leadership or ethics training. This is an accompanying book to be used with the simulation online and includes the information needed to play the game.
